The Late Henry M.
Stanley

Sir Henry Morton Stanley, the most famous of modern explorers, was born of poor parents near Denbigh, Wales, in 1841, and at first bore the name of John Rowlands. When about fifteen he worked his way as cabin boy to New Orleans, where he was employed by a merchant named Stanley, whose name he assumed. He served in the Confederate army in the civil war, contributed to several journals, and in 1867 began his connection with the New York Herald. As its special correspondent he accompanied Lord Napier's Abyssinian expedition, and the first news of the fall of Magdala was conveyed to Britain by the New York Herald. Stanley next went to Spain for his paper and in October, 1869, received from Mr. Gordon Bennett the iconic instruction, "Find Livingstone!" But first he visited Egypt for the opening of the Suez Canal, and travelled through Palestine, Turkey, Persia and India. In January, 1874, he reached Zanzibar, and in March marched into the heart of Africa. On the 10th November he "found" Livingstone at Ujiji. The two explored the north of Lake Tanganyika, and settled that it had no connection with the Nile basin. In March, 1872, Stanley set out for the coast. On his arrival in England he was awarded the medal of the Royal Geographical Society, and his book, "How I Found Livingstone," had an enormous sale. An expedition under Stanley, who had followed the Ashanti campaign for the New York Herald, was fitted out jointly by the Herald and the Daily Telegraph to complete Livingstone's work, and in August, 1874, he left England for Bagamoyo. Thence he made for the Victoria Nyanza, circumnavigated the lake, formed a close friendship with King Mtesa of Uganda, next determined the shape of Lake Tanganyika, passed down the Lualaba to Nyangwe, and by a ten months' journey from Nyangwe traced the course of the Congo to the sea. Having published "Through the Dark Continent" in 1878, in 1879 he again went out to found, under the auspices of the King of the Belgians, the Congo Free State. He took part in the Congo Congress at Berlin in 1884-5, and lectured in Great Britain and America on his African work. In 1886 he was summoned from America to take command of the expedition for the relief of Emin Pasha. In March, he, his officers, Soudanese soldiers, etc., landed at the mouth of the Congo. On the 15th of June the expedition had reached Yambuya, on the Aruwimi, where he left a party of his 650 men under Major Barttelot, and with 388 men marched into the forest. Disaster overtook the rear column, but after long delay, news came that Emin and Stanley had joined hands on the shores of the Albert Nyanza. The return journey was made overland to the east coast, and Bagamoyo was reached in December, 1889. In 1890 he received in London a reception almost royal in its splendor. The Geographical Society gave him a special gold medal and Oxford, Cambridge, Edinburgh and Durham conferred on him honorary degrees. That same year he married the clever artist, Miss Dorothy Tennant. In 1891-2 he lectured in America and Australia. He was naturalized as a British subject in 1892 and stood unsuccessfully for North Lambeth in the Unionist interest; he was, however, returned at the general elections of 1895. Among his published books other than those mentioned are a novel, "My Kalulu," (1873), "Comassie and Magdala," (1874)

"The Congo" (1885), "In Darkest Africa, or the Rescue of Emin" (1890), "My Dark Companions and Their Strange Stories" (1893), and "My Early Travels in America and Asia" (1895).

The Fight at Guru

The London Times has the following graphic account of the attack by Tibetans on the British mission at Guru:—

On March 28 Gen. Macdonald moved north from Phari to join hands with Colonel Youngusband at this place across the Tang La. The first evening he encamped two miles short of the pass and moved on to the 29th. It was a bitterly cold morning, and soon after dawn a white rainbow threatened a bad crossing. A strong north wind was blowing and a freezing mist from Tung plain coated with hoar frost and icicles both men and beasts. About 10 o'clock the sun dispersed the mists, and a long tramp across the level plain brought the force and the convoy of supplies to the dreary spot which has for so long been the home of Col. Youngusband and the other members of the mission. It lies concealed behind a slight rise in the plain until one is within two miles of it. Backed by arid ochreous sandstone dunes six or seven hundred feet high, its outlook is the snowfields, peaks and glaciers of the dividing range which culminates to the west in Chumothori. There is little game to shoot, the only walk is two miles across the plain and back, and the houses which the mission originally occupied were hastily abandoned as unhealthy and filthy beyond power of cleansing. A typical day followed the approach of the General. From early morn till seven at night a piercing wind swept the camp from end to end with a hurricane of grit and the discomfort of the men was increased by the device which Gen. Macdonald adopted to throw dust in the eyes of any Tibetan scouts who might be lurking in the hills which hem in the plain to the west. All tents were struck and the men concealed themselves behind the breastworks all day long. Whether the ruse was successful, or whether the Tibetans themselves found the discomfort too great, the sangars and redans, which they had built to check the advance of the mission, was deserted before sunset. Many believed that they had retired altogether and were taking up a better position several miles further on the road to Gyantze.

At 20 minutes past eight on the following morning, the 31st, the force set out towards the Tibetan defences. These consisted of seven or eight sangars built on the spur, which runs—or rather used to run, for the lake is reduced this spring to a mere tithe of its former dimensions—to the edge of the Bam Tsu. The road runs close under the spur, and possibly, in wet weather, the position selected is not indefensible. This year the fatuity of the Tibetan scheme would, one thinks, be manifest to a child. A clear space of 3,000 yards of level plain stretches between the highway and the nearest swampy place, and no attempt whatever was made to defend this ground. There can be little doubt that the whole project emanated from Lhasa. The authorities there were guided by an obsolete map, or a many-years-old remembrance of the lake, and the general or Deputy who came to conduct operations from the capital had perhaps no authority to select another field for his operations.

The well—it is really a couple of rods with a 12-foot opening in the middle through which the high road takes its way—runs from the end of the spur to a ruined house of mixed stone and adobe about 50 yards away. On the left hand the hills are grassless and gritty, rounded and unstable under foot. The flat plain, extending up to and far beyond the wall, in a continuation of the Tung plain, and like it, of cedar-grey color, with a scanty growth of thistles prickling up here and there through the patches of snow. If you will add to these a bitter south wind blowing all day in increasing strength beneath a hard, ash-grey sky, the scene of the fight will be understood.

Before the expedition had left camp half an hour the usual Tibetan messenger met it, bearing the usual message. Col. Youngusband must retreat to Yatung. If he went far the consequences would be serious. Four miles out, when the Tibetan proparafans were becoming visible, a more notable incident occurred. The Lhasa Dapen himself, accompanied by the Shigatse Dapen, the Phari commandant and Gesu Yeshe Wang-yuk, the Lama representative of the great Ga-dor Lainassary, hurried quickly across the plain and an informal conference was held between the military and political chiefs of the expedition on either side. It was merely a repetition of the same old story. Coached from Lhasa, the delegates had no power, if indeed they had the wish, to say anything but "Go back to Yatung." This importunity and obstinacy had served the Tibetans in good stead for fifteen years, as Col. Youngusband reminded them. How were they to realize that at last the British government was in earnest? After twenty minutes of excited controversy, carried on by the interpretation of Captain O'Connor, who had need to be the most patient of men, the small durbar was broken up, the more important of the Tibetans scattering back to their defences in a cloud of dust. One or two only endeavored by violent gesticulation and shouting all together to secure the retreat of the English. O'Connor, though he was being jostled and ridden off ten times a minute, retained his composure, explaining again and again that the advance must continue until these, too, scampered off on their stout little ponies, shouting excitedly to each other.

It was a curious incident. The impulsive non possumus which Col.

Youngusband returned to the heated declamation of the two senior delegates—all four squatting on the ground and surrounded by motley assemblage of attendant soldiers—the gay yellow and green yellow coats of the generals of Lhasa and Shigatse, the various head-dresses of the Tibetans, the purple and blue robes of a spectated counsellor, the strange, forked gun, embossed with turquoise and coral, the richly worked sword hilts, the little grey and bay ponies saddle-clad with swastika-patterned studded, and gay with filigree brass ornaments and wide embossed iron stirrups, all took on a curious interest, not only as the last appeal of the Tibetans to their ancient policy of isolation and obstinacy, but more impressively still in view of the impending catastrophe.

Hard as it was on the men, the General, at Col. Youngusband's earnest request, consented to issue orders that no man was to use his rifle till the Tibetans had opened fire. This threw away at a stroke the advantage held by our weapons of range and precision and laid the advancing Sepoy open to a withering discharge at point blank range at any moment as approaching any on to the many sangars. It was a case of "gentlemen of the enemy, fire first," which has probably not been known since the days of Pontypridd. Then ensued a strange scene. Oct. towards the lake extended line were pushed forward, far outflanking the wall. While these were slowly closing in on the line of the Tibetans' retreat, the 23rd Pioneers—Musli Sikhs to a man—and the 8th Gurkhas were clearing the hills on the left, making each sangar disgorge its inhabitants one after another. It was done in silence and almost with good humor, but over the two staffs remaining out on the plain, and watching with straining eyes the slow progress of the khaki figures on the two-mile distant slopes, there was a hush of expectation and suspense. At any moment a shot would explode a powder magazine and it was not till the last of the hundreds of grey-coated figures had sullenly come down to the wall that the officers shut up their field glasses and moved in to where the work of disarmament was to take place. The sense of insecurity leashed strength which might break out at any moment, gave place to congratulations, and the incident was regarded as almost over. The Commissioner and the General—it was hardly prudent—rode into the wall together to watch the buddled crowd of Tibetans who had been assembled behind the wall in an irregular mass, covering about as much ground as a battalion in a quarter column. On three sides of them were our guards. The fourth, the line of retreat, alone lay open to them. Two hundred others had been taken prisoners and disarmed already up the hill. These remained passive and thankless spectators of what followed.

But the main body of Tibetans were not subdued, and the unwitting action of the mission leaders almost put it into their power to carry out a scheme which some of their own people have betrayed. This was nothing less than to suffer the advance of the escort through the wall and then to make a combined attack upon Col. Youngusband and the members of his staff. The disarmament upon which Gen. Macdonald insisted would defeat their plans, and when the Sikhs advanced to carry out their orders, there was an ugly growl of protest. In some cases the Pilgrims were actually struck by Tibetans in others a wrestle for the weapon took place. This was not immediately noticeable from where the General and his staff were standing in the opening immediately between the wall and the house, within ten yards of one edge of the mass of Tibetans who numbered about 1,500. It was almost exactly noonday.

The Paper of Lhasa himself was the man who set the slumbering mine ablaze. He was seated on his horse just outside the wall and, exempt himself from the confiscation of his arms, shouted to his men to resist. They replied by stoning the Sikhs. Even then, though the whole affair hung in a slippery balance, indeed, the latter restrained themselves. One of them advanced to the head of the Dapen's pony, and the Lhassan general, in an evil moment for himself and his countrymen, drew his pistol and shot at him, smashing his jaw. There were five seconds' hush, which was broken by another report. A jezail for which a Sikh and a Tibetan were struggling was discharged into the air. But it was almost unnoticed in the sudden onslaught which the Tibetans made to the wall with drawn swords. Such of them as had their pieces ready fired them point blank at the Indian guards, and then, dropping them, lunged themselves into the melee. Two Europeans were caught inside the rooms, and both were wounded, one, Mr. Coulter, the correspondent of the Daily Mail, being severely cut about before his assailants were shot down by Captain Davis of the J. M. S. The other, Major Dunlop, owes his life to Gen. Macdonald, who at ten yards dropped the three Tibetans who had thrown themselves upon him.

But by this time the storm had broken and from three sides at once a hail of bullets rained into the mob of cutting and thrusting Tibetans. Their plan had failed and under the appalling storm of lead they staggered, failed and ran. But it was such a target as is offered not twice in a lifetime. Straight down the line of fire lay their only path of escape. With their own weapons, safety lay 200 yards away. Two hundred yards off was a sharply squared rock, behind which a certain refuge was, they had thought, to be found. But the Gurkhas had stopped this hole-hole from above, and the flying mob moved away along the highroad defences. Men dropped at every yard. Here there was even an ugly heap of dead and wounded men, some 30 in number, within the area of a large room. But every ten yards of the road had its striken down and shapeless burden, till 1,000 yards away some rocks afforded them a temporary shelter, and the winding road saved them from the merciless punishment they had challenged. Punishment is the law. As soon as their first and all too critical assault had failed, they were either for the mission escort to bear except, perhaps, the crossing bullets of their own companions. Shrapnel pursued the luckless remnants of the slowly retreating force—for an altitude of 15,000 feet, running is impossible. On either side the mounted infantry rode down the stragglers into the mountains or across the plains and only a scanty number came unscathed out of the ordeal. The native troops had kept their tempers to breaking point and they had no mercy when the Tibetans' daring attempt to equalize matters and use their vastly superior numbers by a hand-to-hand conflict had failed.

It was a short but terrible lesson. One may hope that it will have its effect upon the sullenness of Lhasa, but there were too few Lamas engaged on their side to bring home to the great ruling monasteries of Tibet the danger of trifling with her southern neighbor when once the day of procrastination is past. An attempt was made to defend Gurukit, two miles on, but this was quickly broken and after establishing a garrison there Gen. Macdonald returned to Tuni against a biting wind and a gathering sky after having made every possible arrangement for the help of the wounded. Such is the brief account of an unparalleled engagement. It remains to be seen whether the lesson will have been learned. It is to be regretted that not one of the four leading Tibetans escaped to tell the tale at home. But the 200 first taken and disarmed will be able to testify to the good faith and treatment which they received at our hands, and it will be difficult to get the country people to meet us in fight again. Indeed some of them openly rejoiced in their freedom that the Gaden Lama was dead.

WAR NOTES

From a private letter written by an artillery officer at Port Arthur, dated April 20, it appears that General Stoezel, the Russian commander there, was then daily expecting the cutting off of his communications. The officer reported that everything was ready to withstand a siege, and expressed surprise at the fact that the enemy had delayed so long. He said the fortresses were practically impregnable, adding that there was a triple row of forts around the Port Arthur garrison, each position being fronted by a moat with a hedge of barbed wire beyond, with bomb-proofs behind all the batteries. The officer further declared that they had plenty of supplies and ammunition, and that the garrison was in excellent spirits and confident of holding out for nine months or a year against any number of the enemy, if they possessed siege guns. General Kurukatin offered Gen. Stoezel reinforcements, but the latter declined them, saying that he had enough men, and did not care to run the risk of an epidemic as a result of over-crowding.

Much uncertainty exists in St. Petersburg as to exactly what is occurring at the theatre of the enemy. Gen. Kurukatin's plans are most carefully guarded. Although he is believed to be concentrating troops near Liao Yang, very little actual information on the subject is obtainable. The general impression, however, is that heavy fighting will occur within a fortnight.

Advices received by the general staff indicates that the Japanese are pushing the campaign in Southern Manchuria with great energy. The rainy season, which will render the roads almost impassable, begins in six weeks, and the latest belief there is that the enemy hopes to make his position secure by a decisive engagement before the rains set in. The army organ believes that at least eight divisions of the enemy are counting 25,000 men in the lower part of the Liao Tung peninsula, are in Southern Manchuria, as to the forces advancing along the lateral from the Yalu, where it is believed another army has landed, information is very incomplete.

The three divisions of Gen. Kurukatin's army separated at Feng Wang Cheng. According to the reports of the Russian scouts, 16,000 infantry, with 40 guns and 1,500 cavalry, moved north to Samatz (Sai-Ma-Ki), whence they could strike either Mukden or Liao Yang. The flank of this force is protected by a battalion of infantry, three squadrons of cavalry, and a mountain battery at Kuang Chan Sang. A division of Japanese Guards proceeded west to Hsi Cheng, and 10,000 infantry, with fifty guns, mostly mountain pieces, moved southwest toward Hsi Ning, and reached the Shihzaypu fort of the Ta-Yang river Tuesday, leaving on Wednesday for Suyan Chou. How many reserves came up behind them on the Feng Wang Cheng road is not known.

All of these forces, at the rate of travelling, are due to their destinations Saturday or Monday. The Russians are in the dark as to the place where to await the Japanese attack. It is considered possible that the northern force will be heavily reinforced and that a simultaneous attack of the southern force will clear the road to Nau Chiwang, and permit the enemy to move directly northward and strike the Russian flank at Liao Yang or Mukden.

MONK COMES OUT

FROM THE SILENT SHADE

The French Leader at Last Takes Part in the Railway Debate. Eleven amendments Moved (Bulletin Special Dispatch).

Ottawa, May 19th.—The Transcontinental Bill reached the stage of third reading in the House of Commons today. Eleven amendments were moved by the Opposition by way of obstruction. Three of the amendments had all or chiefly been discussed in committee of the whole and ostensibly they were put up for the purpose of securing the votes of the members.

For the first time this session, Mr. Monk took an active part in the debate and moved the first amendment. Hitherto he has been silent under the shadow of public displacement from the French leadership by Tarte. His action to-night indicates that Tarte has failed to secure that leadership. Monk's amendment was defeated by 90 to 82. Popp's amendment was defeated by 92 to 42. Although there were eleven amendments proposed these were the only votes taken. The others were declared lost on the same division although when the first amendment of eight o'clock was voted on there were only fourteen Opposition members in the chambers. The House adjourned to-night until Wednesday the 25th. Arrangements are being made for the final vote on the third reading for Thursday next.

Measles in the MacKenzie Basin

All the Eskimo living in Mackenzie basin with the exception of ten families have been killed by the ravages of the disease, says Bishop Drennan. Before the epidemic there were 40 to 50 families with a total of perhaps 150 to 200 or more souls. The great ravages of the disease and the awful results are told by Bishop Drennan, who has just returned from a long and tedious journey from the mouth of the Mackenzie. He says:

"The natives when attacked by the dread disease, living in a scant way and without the protection and advantages of civilization, soon die to the surface."

"Few, if any whites, were among them. The Eskimo of that region refused the association of the whites and the churches could not convert them. Disease and a lack of knowledge of whites from the Arctic whalers first came into contact with the Eskimo and they naturally feared all whites thereafter."

"Our missionaries, however, came to convert the Eskimo, but without the least effect. Father Lefebvre, now of Dawson, once found his efforts absolutely fruitless. The whalers had dulled the edge of friendship and confidence."

"The families which have suffered so greatly have made their homes on the lower Mackenzie. Many other Eskimo live along the Arctic coast, east and west of the Mackenzie, but I do not know that the disease prevalent among them is as yet unsought and untaught people simply because of their intolerance of the whites. It is much better for them that they have shunned rather than cultivated the whalers after once having had a bitter lesson of imposition from their visitors."

The ravages which carried off the Mackenzie Eskimo occurred last spring but the news from the Mackenzie comes out by such slow and tortuous routes that it is difficult to say that it is doubtful if civilization has learned of the full importance of the epidemic as now reported by Bishop Drennan. The Bishop left the Mackenzie country a few weeks ago.

Apple Trees For the Northwest

Calgary Herald.—It will be very satisfactory to learn that Dr. William Sanders, director of Canadian experiments in fruit growing, has found an apple tree to be found that will thrive and grow well generally in the Western and North West climates. It has been brought about by crossing the Duchesne or Wealthy variety with a crab apple. The fruit is said to be very large and that it will be admirably adapted for domestic use.

The climate of the North West is not different from that of other countries in that it may require a selection of a particular kind of tree to grow and the best variety is acclimatizing. Experiments and tests with various trees this about and apparently Dr. Sanders has one kind that will grow. People can therefore try it with a good amount of success in sight.

Apple trees have grown successfully in certain parts of Alberta. At Medicine Hat such trees have and we understand Mr. Findlay has been very successful with them. In Calgary certain varieties have been planted and seem to grow quite as well as the Duchesne or Wealthy. Mr. Findlay in his garden has one or two trees entering the fifth season and quite a number in the fourth season, and hopes to have some bearing fruit this season.

The experiments and tests are therefore continued and it is hoped a large number of people will be operated by further experiments. The question will be settled and we have no doubt it will be shown that Alberta and the Territories can grow fruit trees.

Mr. Osler's Railway Exploits

Free Press: Before Mr. Justice Purdie, attorney-general for the Dominion of Canada vs. C.P.R., was commenced this morning. This suit was instituted by the attorney-general against the C.P.R. The Canada Northwest Land Co., Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, E. B. Osler and R. B. Angus as defendants.

In June, 1882, when the C.P.R. was constructed through Manitoba the W. P. they took extensive tracts of land through which their main line passed, which were sold to and vested in the Canada Northwest Land Co. Subsequently for the sake of convenience the lands were vested in Lord Strathcona, E. B. Osler, R. B. Angus and the late Mr. Scarratt as trustees, with power to deal with the lands, as set forth in the agreement entered into.

The C.P.R. was entitled to the odd numbered sections and the crown to the even numbered ones, so the government and C.P.R. joined in a setting aside of certain lands for the town sites of Regina, Moose Jaw, Qu'Appelle and Virden, and in October, 1883, an agreement was entered into by the crown and the C.P.R. for the vesting of the lands in the trustees, the crown to have sites for government purposes and the C.P.R. to have free sites for railway purposes. The trustees were to pay over one-half the proceeds to the crown.

The government alleged that the expenses of management and commissions to the trustees were too large and an agreement was entered into that agreement the crown brought this action for an account and for the administration and winding up of the trust and for payment of any balance found due to the crown on taking the lands.

Impressed with Canada

Montreal, Quebec, May 18.—A. Cleon a representative of the Belgian government and several of the Belgian government societies have been for the past six months touring Canada in the interest of a large Belgian immigration society.

Mr. Cleon, who is now on his way home, stated today that he was more than satisfied with what he had seen. Canada was evidently fitted for the residence of his countrymen who made a good living as farmers.

Outside the towns and cities his people were disposed to cultivate the land. As a matter of fact there was a considerable number of Belgians in the country already, and in the neighborhood of 10,000 in the Lake and Lake Temiskaming, in New Ontario, not a few had made a notable success of farming.

He had been appointed by the Belgian government some time ago to come to the country and the purpose of his visit, with his own eyes what prospects could be held out.

He would report most favorably. The resources of the country were simply wonderful. He believed some of his countrymen would in the immediate future find their way to this country.

WESTERN NEWS

—Free Press: Hon. Mr. LaRivière, M.P., for Provencher, arrived home from Ottawa yesterday and will remain for a few days to attend to some general business. He expects that the session of the Commons will extend over another two months at least. Some contemplated tariff changes, however, will be dealt with after the Grand Trunk Pacific bill has been disposed of and will probably occupy considerable time.

—Free Press: A Rossland paper says: A report is to hand that the one-armed convict Mulholland is serving three years in the Stony Mountain penitentiary, Manitoba, for a crime similar to the vicious assault for which he was arrested in Rossland a couple of years ago. Mulholland was awaiting trial at the Nelson jail when he scaled the jail yard, wall and escaped, eluding the vigorous search instituted immediately. The authorities will probably make an effort to secure that thug when his sentence in Manitoba expires.

—Free Press: Julius Asszaki, a farmer of De Salaberry municipality on Saturday was committed by Magistrate McNeiher to stand his trial on the charge of attempting to murder a neighbor named Michael Piotock. Difference of religion led to a quarrel between the two men, and the breach gradually widened. Finally one night while Piotock was passing Asszaki's farm a shot was fired at him, which fortunately failed to take effect. The trial and committal followed.

—Fort William, May 15th: William Whyte, third vice-president and manager of the western division of the CPR, arrived last night in the private car, Barnsby, and spent to-day in consultation with the G.P.R. officials here. This afternoon the press representative had an interview with Mr. Whyte, and he stated that the company will build a working house to run elevator "B." The new structure will have a capacity of unloading forty cars per hour, and be one of the most complete and modern houses built by the company. The building will be located near elevator "E," which will also be the means of giving the railway more yard room on the ground occupied by elevator "B" destroyed by fire.

—An Arcola dispatch says: The C.P.R. have begun the work of completing the extension from here to Regina. One contractor and his outfit have been at work for some days, and yesterday a party of surveyors under the direction of Robert Black, C.E., started out to run the lines for the small portions of the grades yet to be constructed. With favorable weather the line is expected to be completed in between two and three months.

—Free Press: C. W. Speers, Dominion Inspector of immigration, writes from the west that passengers wishing to cross connections for points along the Prince Albert branch, should leave Winnipeg Monday or Thursday. By leaving on these days direct connection may be made at Regina. The transfer arrangements at Lumsden have been completed and are working most satisfactorily, while the railway company is fast getting their tracks in shape for traffic. There are but a few places north of Regina which still need seed grain and these are being supplied without difficulty.

—Swift Current Sun: Some heavy losses in sheep are reported from the south. One outfit about forty miles up the Swift Current creek started in the winter with three thousand head, and lost all but three hundred. Another had eighteen hundred, and came through with one hundred and fifty. Still another rancher, during the storm last May lost heavily, and, learning by this experience, made preparations for the winter just past. He put up plenty of hay last summer, built good and ample shelter for the animals with the result that he came through with losing only one steer. At our Swift Current farm a nice healthy young flock of sheep may be seen which are now cross wintering by the enterprising manager. It is the old story repeated. "Be prepared for any emergency and all will be well." If we are prepared only for the best unexpected misfortune is sure to befall us.

The Great Renowned Stomach Cure of the Age.

In the deep south whence man came, in the great storehouse of nature, the great remedy of modern times, it is said, is a native remedy for most of the ills to which the human flesh is heir, especially of the blood, stomach, liver and kidneys. Coming from nature it is perfectly pure, and if you are suffering from disease of the stomach and will give Vitis One trial according to directions and are not cured, your money will cheerfully be refunded, and you shall be the judge. Jap Soldiers, Their Food and Dress

The Japanese regiment of infantry consists of three battalions of four companies each, of a total strength of 1,400 officers and men. In each regiment there are 48 regimental bearers, distinguished by a red band worn above the elbow of the left arm. The scope of the regimental medical service in action comprises medical aid in the fighting line and at the dressing stations. These stations are closed when the bearer companies begin their work. The medical officer and his assistants are employed at the front under fire at the temporary dressing stations referred to, but the Japanese regulations require the regimental medical service to keep well closed up with the fighting line, and to conform to its movements. The equipment is similar to that carried by all armies, but is very liberally supplied. The medicines are of the small European kinds, morphine, iodoform, Hoffman's antiseptic, etc.

The bearer company forms a divisional organization, consisting of a central administration and two sub-divisions of three sections each, of a total strength of 416 officers and men and 51 horses. There are 10 medical officers and 4 pharmacists. This column is under the control of the division commander, who is advised by the chief of the division medical staff. Each bearer column bears the name of the division to which it belongs, and is organized so that it can at any time be divided into two equal parts. Ordinarily one half marches with the advance guard and the other half in the main body. The function of the bearer company is to act between the dressing stations and the field hospitals.

The food of the army in time of peace consists of 36 ounces of rice, and six cents for the purchase of beef, chicken, pork, fish or vegetables, tea, pepper and miso, a kind of pea flour. That amount of money does not purchase much of these articles, but the Japanese are satisfied with a very small proportion of animal food if they can have their rice flavored with fish or "soy." The rice is boiled in bulk in large pots for each section of a company. The daily field ration consists of rice, 23 ounces; chicken, beef, pork or fish, 5 ounces; of preserved meat, 21-2 ounces; of dried meat, 4 ounces; with vegetables, fresh, 5 ounces; or dried vegetables, 2 ounces; apples, 17-8 ounces; preserved plums, 11-2 ounces; and salt, miso, tea, a sufficiency. The cooking is very simple. If the men were with their regiments the cooking utensils were brought up with the column, the rice was boiled in large boilers and the preserved meat, vegetables, etc., which each man carried for himself, were added by the men themselves. Each battalion carried a box containing appliances for analysis of water, and medical officers were sent on ahead to examine each proposed camping place. Each battalion also carried wooden filters. The water was, where necessary, ordered to be boiled, but this was often not carried out, as it appeared to be nobody's business to see that it was done.

Dress—The weight of the infantry clothing and equipment, including rifle, ammunition and special ration, was 56 pounds, 12 ounces. Besides the ordinary great coat during the cold weather, the officers and men mobilized for the war (1894) had one made of brown Mackinaw, with a hood and special covering for the head, concealed under the collar, and a pair of mittens of the same material as the coat. It came down to the ankles, and had a band to buckle around the waist. The men in the field had a paper shirt and a pair of drawers. In very cold weather these were worn between the usual under and over shirts and were said to be very warm. There was considerable suffering from ill-fitting shoes and canvas gaiters and cotton socks. The knapsack was faulty and pressed usually on the chest and armpit. The material of which the tunics and trousers were made was of blue cloth with stripes of different color to distinguish the different arms of the service.

BOARD OF TRADE

The council of the board of trade met in the office of Secretary Tinn yesterday to consider various matters. The most important question, dealt with, was that of C.N.R. construction being carried eastward from Edmonton during the present summer. The vice president and secretary were instructed to wire President MacKenzie of the C.N.R., pointing out the advisability of beginning construction operations at the end of the line at once.

The next practice of the Choral Society will be held in Sanderson's Hall on Wednesday, June 1st, at 8 o'clock. —A. Smith with camp in a day or two will leave for Willow Hill to open a real estate and auctioneers office on McDougall street.

A basket picnic will be held on May 24th on the southeast corner of Mr. A. Hutchings farm, Poplar Lake, six miles north of Edmonton. A football match will be played in the afternoon between Turnip Lake and Poplar Lake teams.

It is learned from reliable sources this afternoon that the deal has been closed by which Messrs. Revillon Freres have leased the two lots adjoining their premises and that arrangements are being made to remove the present buildings, preparatory to the erection of the large block planned by them to occupy the premises.

—Free Press: The Rev. Father Fignon, O.M.I., who has been absent for some months on mission work in the States, returns to the city on Monday. He leaves again on ministerial duties in the West. He will visit Calgary, Edmonton, St. Albert and other points in Alberta, where he will spend some time. After concluding his work there he will proceed to British Columbia, where he will remain until his duties will keep him busy for several months, after which he expects to return to the city.

Calgary Herald: The city police expect to have the census completed this evening, or early to-morrow. There is considerable speculation as to what the population of the city is. From the number of some of the districts it was believed for many days that the figures would go above 100,000. Until the enumerators total up all the figures the exact population will not be known, but there is every indication that the census made by the police will show that 9,000 or more people live here.

Free Press: Mr. C. H. Stuart Wade, F.R.G.S., of Edmonton, is in the city to represent the "Fiscal Capitalists" as British settlers, commissioners representing the town of Edmonton. Mr. Wade is making his headquarters at the Winnipeg hotel, where he will be glad to give information to any individual or party of colonists who are taking the next route to the Northwest. Mr. Wade has the support of the town council of Edmonton through a special committee, as well as the board of trade. The Edmonton commissioners fully concur with the requirements of those in the Northwest having himself spent nearly three years in continuous exploration of the Northwest.

PERSONAL.

Jeremiah Daly of Spruce Grove is in town today.

Football practice tonight at seven o'clock on the Hudson Bay grounds. All players are requested to turn out.

Messrs. K. A. McLeod and T. A. Stephen went out to Cooking Lake this morning. Messrs. Baymer, Petrie, Taylor, Supple and Osborne go out tomorrow.

PUT UP THE CASH

The Edmonton Street Railway Co. this morning through their solicitor deposited in a local bank the $10,000 cash guarantee called for by the terms of their agreement with the town, to be forfeited in case of violation of the contract given them by the town.

The deposit of the guarantee by the company is the practical assumption of the obligations of the contract and is taken as evidence of their intentions to proceed with the construction of the line within the specified time.

Cattle Thief Shot

Chamberlain, N. D., May 17.—In a running fight on horses, in which both shot at the same time, Jack Sully, the head of a gang of cattle thieves, was killed by United States Marshalls Petri and Posson, on Rosebud, the Indian reserve. Sully fell riddled with bullets.

MEETING

The annual district meeting of the Edmonton Methodist church closed in the church here last evening, when a round table on Methods and Value of Revival Work was conducted by Rev. C. F. Hopkins of Sturgeon River, followed by the general session.

In the afternoon Rev. Principal Biddle addressed the meeting on the work of Alberta college which was followed by a conference on district work.

The sessions of the meeting have been marked throughout by the utmost unanimity and enthusiasm. The rapid development of the district has complicated the work very much, and though the districts are divided, and the smaller district this year has been found too large and conference will be asked at the forthcoming session to again divide it.

BASEBALL GAME TONIGHT

Strathcona and Edmonton will play baseball on the Hudson Bay grounds to-night. The game is called for seven o'clock sharp.

Arrangements were not completed for the game until this morning when a telephone message from Strathcona was received accepting the invitation to play to-night. As the local team have got in some good hard practice since the game of Friday last in Strathcona, the winning game is looked for and a large crowd will no doubt turn out.

FOOTBALL TO-MORROW
EVENTING

The Strathcona football team come over to-morrow evening to play the local team. The match will be played on the Hudson Bay grounds and is billed for 7:30 o'clock.

As the match on Friday last on the Strathcona grounds was a tie, the game to-morrow is expected to be close and interesting.

SUPREME COURT

A three days' session of the Supreme Court was concluded yesterday, Judge Scott presiding. The session was occupied with civil cases, eighteen being disposed of.

The regular session of the court opens on Wednesday of next week.

Wallace, who attempted suicide at the Fort on Monday has been sent up for trial and his case will come up at the session opening on Wednesday next.
